

20 | The Yellowstone Club, Big Sky, Mont. (8.2000)

The ultra-swanky private ski resort also features a Tom Weiskopf-designed course with rolling terrain like you'd expect from a ski mountain. Michael Meldman's Discovery Land group took over club operations in 2009, and the club has recovered from financial issues, as it's ranked as the fourth-best course in Montana in Golf Digest's latest Best in State rankings. --SH

Golf Digest panelist comments:

"Stunning views and a handful of great holes, especially the par 3s. The land is heavily sloped as any ski resort property would be -- it's an outstanding property."

"Beautiful, scenic course with terrific elevation changes with mountain backdrops."

"Tom Weiskopf did an exceptional job building a golf course on the side of a mountain, with 2,100 vertical feet from the high point to the low point of the course."
